Commanders Report

Well we have arrived to October already! Time has flown by this year, I suppose I have told y'all many times what someone told me a long time ago, so long ago I did not understand, but I surely do now. "Life is like a roll of toilet paper, the closer you get to the end the faster it rolls".

Eddie and I got out to "Soldiers Rest" and replaced the flags on the pole and took up all the small flags. Ran into Josh Edwards out there and he helped us, I think Josh will be a very good Confederate, he hangs around in cemeteries a lot.

Seems like our flag is in the news again or rather most all the time. I wonder if any other state flag has had the press coverage that ours has had. I was part of the S.C.V. group that went over in 1993 and signed in as "Friends of the Ms. State flag". This was when they filed suit against Gov. Fordice to remove the flag. Our S.C.V. Judge Advocate, the Honorable Stone Barfield felt our state Attorney General would not assign a attorney to represent the State that would have our interests at heart, he was right. We got in the news then and seems like the flag has been in the news most of the time since then. It has survived, hope it can continue.

Soon we will have to get out at the monument and clip the grass, spray roundup and put in some more pine straw. Will let y'all know when I can get out there or y'all can go without me.

Have not been up to see Sam for a few days, but I was told he was doing better, visiting with his company, catching up on some of his reading. Hope to see you at the next meeting, Wayne McMaster

Sam Price

As you know, Sam has had an issue with a wound on his foot. He spent several days in the hospital for this issue. After returning home, somehow the ankle on his bad foot broke and he returned to the hospital. Based on the original issue with his foot, the options were limited. He has had surgery and is now recuperating in Covenant. He is unable to put any weight on his foot for several months. Keep Sam in your prayers and keep in contact with him.

Prayers

Keep the family of Joe Loviza in your prayers. Joe's wife passed away this month

Prayers

Keep Larry Holman and his family in our Prayers.

A Beautiful Day in the Cemetery

Wayne, Josh Edwards and myself spent a beautiful Friday afternoon in Cedar Hill. We replaced the two flags on soldiers rest flag pole and removed old flags from veterans graves. Of course Wayne kept us up on the history of the cemetery.

LEE'S FAREWELL TO THE ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA

Thanks to Father John Sigmon one of the founders of our camp and past Mississippi Division Commander. John lives in Oregon and is a member of the John C. Pemberton camp. He is the associate priest at Saint Mark's Anglican Church in nearby

Klamath Falls, Oregon, a conservative and traditional Episcopal body.

It was the final hour—the dying gasp of that ragged army. For four years they had fought the invaders of their beloved Southland; fought them in the beautiful valley of the Shenandoah, fought them in the tangled swamps of Virginia’s peninsula; fought them in Pennsylvania, in Maryland and more often than not, fought their blue coated foes to a shivering standstill.

If it was the final hour for those brave few of the Army of Northern Virginia, it was the finest hour for its Commander. And while he had and would face perils and perplexities, for Confederate General Robert E. Lee –as it was said in another time about a brave people. ”this, was his—their –finest hour.” It was his composure in defeat, his care for his men, and his faith in He who orders all things for the good of His children. They stood out then. And they stand out today.

The days preceding that awful 9th of April, 1865, were tragic. Forced from the trenches around Petersburg, his army bravely withstood all the assaults of their enemy. Down the hard road to Appomattox they retreated, hoping it would lead to fresh supplies and renewed strength. It never happened. So came the 9th of April.

The story of that day is part of our legacy as the descendants of those soldiers. For there, in an out of the way home, the saga of the Army of Northern Virginia came to a bitter end. Lee left the meeting with Grant, and astride his faithful mount, Traveler, he encountered his brave veterans as he returned to the Confederate lines. They had only one question, “General” they asked, “Are we surrendered?” History records that his eyes filled with tears, and for the moment too overcome with emotion to speak, he simply removed his hat and nodded. When he regained some of his composure he sought, in halting words, to address his brave few: those who had remained steadfast to the last.

“Men,” he said, “We have fought the war together and I have done the best I could for you. You will all be paroled and go to your homes until exchanged.” The tears came again, and unable to say more, he choked out a good bye.

The news spread through his army like a grass fire. We are told of the reactions of his men; officers sat on their horses and wept openly, others smashed their rifles against the nearest tree. Men were prostrated on the ground in their grief. One man cried, “Blow Gabriel, blow! My God, let him blow, I am ready to die!” One officer stood in the middle of the road, firing his pistol at an oncoming group of Yankees, until at last he was killed. Perhaps the feelings of the many were summed up by the statement of one, who in this moment of the profoundest grief, grasped Lee’s fingers and said, “Farewell, General Lee. I wish for your sake and mine that every damned Yankee on earth was sunk ten miles deep in Hell!”

The hours to come were full of the necessary tasks for him and his staff. Reports had to be made, and in this time before word processors and printers, all had to be copied by hand, and sent out for distribution. Federal officers came to see him, usually in groups of four or five. They were greeted with a stony glare that stopped the interviews from being anything more than perfunctory greetings. The old lion was at bay, but he still had teeth.

Over and above all the administrative details Lee had to oversee, there came the most painful of all: composing his farewell to his army. As the evening of that day came, he sat with several of his officers at a fire that burned in front of his tent. They talked of the army, and of the uncertainty they all would face in the days to come. Finally Lee turned to his Assistant Adjutant General, Lieutenant Colonel Charles Marshall and ordered him to prepare the document.

It was raining the next day, the 10th of April, 1865. Still, the adverse weather did not halt the comings and goings of the many who had official business with the General—nor those who albeit reverently, came to gawk. Eventually Lee turned to Marshall and asked for the document. Marshall told him that he had been so occupied with the details of the surrender that he hadn’t been able to get it done. Lee's solution was quick and simple; he ordered Marshall into his personal ambulance to compose the document and posted a sentry outside it to keep him from being disturbed. Marshall went to work.

The first results weren't long coming. That draft was done in pencil. When presented to Lee, the General crossed out an entire paragraph. He apparently felt that its inclusion would engender hard feelings. With a few other minor corrections, he handed it back to Marshall. The Colonel retreated back to the ambulance, and wrote out another draft. Soon it was done, and he stepped from the vehicle and hurried through the rain to the General's tent. Lee signed the draft, and Marshall then gave the copy to a nameless Headquarters clerk, who copied it in ink. No one knows the content of the deleted paragraph. Copies were made and distributed to the various Corps commanders and the general staff. There apparently is no original document. Marshall probably destroyed or misplaced the penciled copy Lee corrected. As an aside, an amended draft is held by Marshall's descendants, in Marshall's handwriting. Still, it can't be proven that it is the document given to the Headquarters clerk to copy. Many copies, with some variations, were presented to Lee for his signature, to be kept as heirlooms. The text in this article is the one Custis Lee copied into General Lee's letter book.

For Robert E. Lee, those days marked an end and a beginning. No longer at the head of that famous fighting force, the Army of Northern Virginia, he left Appomattox, and along with his battered ambulance and a few companions, made his way to Richmond. There, in a rented house, his family awaited him. Sadly, the days of his life were numbered. In the ensuing five years he had left, he assumed the presidency of a nearly defunct Washington College, devoting his remaining days to educating what was left of Southern manhood. He died one rainy October day, from an illness contracted while attending a vestry meeting in the cold, damp Episcopal Church where he worshipped. And so he passed into legend.

The years to come were bitter for the conquered South. Faced with Federal military occupation, the disenfranchisement of her best citizens for their service to the Confederacy, and the escalation of the former slaves to positions of power, the South struggled. Eventually, finally, the troops were withdrawn, and the survivors of the conquered nation found work to feed their families and the wherewith to rebuild what the invaders had destroyed. In the days to come, Lee became enshrined in their memories. He has emerged as the epitome of character, spirituality, and military genius. And we, the descendants of those soldiers, have never forgotten him.

There is another thing that we remember. It's that document penned so long ago, within the confines of a rickety ambulance with the rain coming down steadily outside. Its title was simple enough: General Order "9, dated April 10, 1865. We have come to know it as Lee's Farewell to the Army of Northern Virginia. Generations of Southern children have recited it while standing in front of their class in school. For myself, when as a pre-teen I was instructed to memorize Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, I refused. Rather than recite "Four score and seven years ago.." I proudly substituted "After four years of arduous service, marked by unsurpassed courage and fortitude....," Lee's final words to his army. I failed the class. My Southern mother raised my allowance. And raised hell with the teacher. It's never been forgotten...for those who can remember...DO remember.

And it's well that we do. For within the space of four paragraphs we find a celebration of the valor of our soldiers. Plus the care of their General who was deeply concerned for them, right down to the lowliest private who pulled a trigger in the defense his South and our way of life. Therein lies a hope and trust that a God of Mercy would look upon and preserve those ragged veterans in the coming days. There was a staunch and grateful recollection of their service to him. It's all there—honor, value and faith. And in the end....but let the words of General Order #9 speak for themselves.

“After four years of arduous service, marked by unsurpassed courage and fortitude, the Army of Northern Virginia has been compelled to yield to overwhelming numbers and resources. I need not tell the brave survivors of so many hard fought battles who have remained steadfast to the last, that I have consented to this result from no distrust of them; but feeling that valor and devotion could accomplish nothing that would compensate for the loss that must have attended the continuance of the contest, I have determined to avoid the useless sacrifice of those whose past services have endeared them to their countrymen. By the terms of the agreement, officers and men can return to their homes and remain until exchanged. You will take with you the satisfaction that proceeds from the consciousness of duty faithfully performed, and I earnestly pray, that a merciful God, will extend to you His blessing and protection. With an unceasing admiration of your constancy and devotion to your country, and a grateful remembrance of your kind and generous consideration for myself, bid you all an affectionate farewell.”

Some would say it's just a historical footnote, one that would pale in comparison with the so called Great Emancipators Gettysburg address. For them, that's fine. But for us...those who are the proud descendants of the men and women who held out for four years against overwhelming odds, it's more than just that. It speaks of the Confederate fighting man, terrible in battle and unmatched in valor. It speaks of the real reason for the loss of our cause...numbers and resources. And finally, it speaks of our faith in an All Wise Providence who alone orders the fate of men, in spite of plague, famine, fire or war. It speaks for us...you and me. It's an embodiment.....of Dear Old Dixie. Read it. Learn it. And NEVER....forget it.

Bobb Murder, Horrible Murder by Colored Soldiers

Mr. John H Bobb, The Murdered man, was Sam Price's wife Carol's, Great - whatever - Uncle. The Brother of her Great Grand ----- Mother. Thanks to Sam for this info.

A Peaceable Citizen of Vicksburg was Shot Dead in Cold Blood by Negro Troops in Vicksburg Ms. on the 18th of May 1864. Mr. John H. Bobb, a peaceable unoffending citizen, was most brutally murdered by Negro Soldiers. Mr. John H. Bobb and a man by the name of Mattingly, on going to Mr. John H. Bobb's house for dinner, found a lot of Negro Soldiers picking flowers on his premises. The Negroes said they didn't know whose house they had occupied. Angry words passed, and they applied to him very coarse and insulting language, when Mr. John H. Bobb, being enraged, knocked down a Negro Sergeant with a stone. The Negro vowed revenge on him, and threatened to burn his house. Mr. John H. Bobb, immediately came to see General Slocum not anticipating anything but his arrest. General Slocum promised to protect his property and person against anything unlawful. As Mr. John H. Bobb went to his home, Fifteen or Twenty Negro Soldiers led by a Sergeant, arrested him and Mattingly. When leading them off, Mr. John H. Bobb asked, where is your Lieutenant? Where are your officers? The Negro replied. "D—n the officers, we can fix you without Officers." Mr. John H. Bobb supposed he was to be taken before the Colonel of the Regiment for examination. He was however, taken through a Machine Shop and after getting one hundred and fifty yards down a Bayou, one Negro fired a gun, the ball passing through Mr. John H. Bobb's back and coming out of his abdomen. He fell, and another shot struck him through the cheek. Mattingly ran and escaped, the blacks stopping over Mr. John H. Bobb's body. They followed him, however, until pursuit was useless to their purposes, as he met Dr. Churchill, who protected him. One ball went thorough his coat. Mrs. Bobb and Mr. Raum came to General Slocum's headquarters, and he sent down a reliable officer. – Major Gwinden, of his staff to ascertain, the true position of affairs, when he got to the ground Mr. John H.

Bobb was dead, and the disconsolate and senseless wife over his body, with seventy – five black soldiers standing about the body along the bayou, shouting vociferously. “We’re taking them now.” The Major immediately ordered the arrest of all the parties, but up to this writing the sergeant alone has been arrested. Others will be arrested and be punished. General Slocum has no prejudice on account of color, but would punish any white soldiers who would perpetrate any such inhuman act. There is but one sentiment and desire hereon the subject, and that is that the perpetrators of this atrocity shall be blind, if General Slocum does not find out and hang these men there is no security for life to any man and his unfit to be command.

Letter to Ole Miss

Ole Miss and the New Bigots by Ben Jones

The brilliant editor H.L. Mencken had a way of being succinct that sparkled with wit. "There is no idea so stupid that you can't find a professor who will believe it," he remarked. Mencken would have a field day with the recent actions of the University of Mississippi. If you have ever wondered why academia is often the butt of ridicule and humor, you need only to read the report from Ole Miss President Dan Jones entitled, "Action Plan on Consultant Reports and Update on the Work of the Sensitivity and Respect Committee." We are told that the Extended Sensitivity and Respect Committee has decided that the new Vice Chancellor for Diversity and Inclusion will work with the Institute for Racial Diversity and the new Center for Inclusion and Cross Cultural Engagement.
Fellow compatriots, I am not making this up. This is not a satire, this is what the taxpayers of Mississippi are dishing out their hard-earned money to pay for. President Jones further stated, "It is my hope that the steps outlined here reflecting the hard work of University committees and our consultants will prove valuable in making us a stronger and healthier university, bringing us closer to our goal of being a warm and welcoming place for every person, every day, regardless of race, religion, preference, country of origin, ability, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation or gender expression." In my opinion, this is an astounding demonstration of politically correct, "feel-good", unadulterated hogwash as has ever been uttered by a man on the public payroll. And having spent four years in the United States Congress, I have heard some world-class hogwash in my day. President Jones, sounding a lot like Mr. Rogers Neighborhood, has listed every possible group that might be sensitive to not being "included" in this unlimited "diversity", even one I've never heard of: "gender expression." Well, whatever that means, I figure it is o.k. if one expresses their gender at Ole Miss. There is one very large group that is not included, however. It is those of us whose ancestors fought for the Confederacy during the War Between the States. There are over 70 million of us, but it is as if we do not exist, or have deep feelings toward our forefathers. In fact, without a straightforward explanation, the famous Oxford street named Confederate Drive is being renamed by these academics in the name of "inclusion". That intentional insult puts the lie to any pretense of "inclusion" or of respect or of diversity on the part of the University of Mississippi. The Confederacy existed. Thousands of young Mississippians died for it. That conflict has been the crucible event of American history. Everything before led up to it. Everything after has been influenced by it. The entire student body of the University of Mississippi enlisted in the Confederate Army and those young men suffered 100% casualties. That war is an historical reality and we do not flinch from that reality and its consequences. Those men and their descendants built the University and kept it going through good times and bad, and through the social changes of the past 150 years. That street was named for those brave young students. The University, in its narrow-minded rush to be politically correct, has banished that little bit of respect by renaming Confederate Drive. In their sanctimonious zeal, they have demeaned the honor and reputation of our ancestors. In the last fifty years or so we have witnessed a truly remarkable revolution in race relations in the South. Where once there was Jim Crow and strict segregation, there is now a multi-cultural society that has the fastest growing economy in the United States. Men and women of good hearts have come together in brotherhood and cooperation to enjoy racial relations that are an exemplar for other regions. This "bridge-building" has been built on an acceptance of the past and the promise of a shared future, not the divisive finger-pointing of the academics and the politicians. These politically correct crusaders are practicing a new kind of bigotry. It is a movement that demonizes the Confederacy and lays the sins of America entirely upon the South. If they continue to have their way, they would eradicate every vestige of our cultural history. They ask for respect but give none. Once again, we must make our voices heard in every way possible. We must demand the respect that our families deserve. We are the last line of defense for the dignity that our ancestors earned.

Changing the name against the Law

The Mississippi Division Commander with the aid of the Division Judge Advocate has reviewed Code 55-15-81. Based on this the wheels are in motion. The chancellor and vice-provost on diversity affairs have been served a summons to appear on Oct. 27th 2014 to address our petition for injunction and a temporary restraining order on renaming Confederate Drive. The same summons is being served to the attorney generals office since that office is the agent for the University of Mississippi in such matters. Game is on. Keep the prayers going.

Death Of J. S. Gage From Commander Terrell

Read this and you will understand why we must engage Ole Miss to protect our ancestor's name and our heritage. this young man was a student at Ole Miss. Gage died on July 3, 1863, Sergeant in Company A, 11th Mississippi at Gettysburg

"The first to arrive, borne on a litter, was a princely fellow and favored son of the Eleventh Mississippi. I saw in an instant a condition of terrible shock. He laid back the blanket and exposed his lower abdomen torn through left to right by a cannon shot. Without the slightest change of voice, he asked "Doctor, how long have I to live?" A very few hours I replied. "Oh, my darling mother." he said "Quick, I want to write" After finishing his letter, he said " Doctor, I am in great agony. Let me die easy. " I handed him a cup of black drop, a concentrated dose of opium. He feebly waved the cup, saying "Come around, boys, and let us have a toast. I drink the toast to you to the Southern Confederacy, and to victory!" In about an hour, passing hastily, I lifted the cover from his face, to find him sleeping painlessly.

Jeremiah Gage's dying words letter reached its destination. Today in Greenwood, Mississippi, Jeremiah's great great nice, Gage McLendon Roberson, cherishes that letter

"My Dear Mother,

" This is the last you may ever hear from me. I have time to tell you that I died like a man. Bear my loss as best you can.

Remember that I am true to my country and my greatest regret at dying is that she is not free and that you and my sisters are robbed of my worth, whatever that may be. I hope this will reach you and you must not regret that my body can not be obtained. It is a mere matter of form anyhow. This is for my sisters too as I can write not write more. Send my dying release to Miss Mary... you know who.

How the Big Lie Works

Next the statesmen will invent cheap lies, putting the blame upon the nation that is attacked, and every man will be glad of those conscience-soothing falsities, and will diligently study them, and refuse to examine any refutations of them; and thus he will by and by convince himself that the war is just, and will thank God for the better sleep he enjoys after this process of grotesque self-deception

AN OPEN LETTER TO HERO DOGS, INC. OF BROOKEVILLE , MARYLAND

Dear Desma J. Wade and Jennifer Lund,

Recently, members of our organization, Sons of Confederate

Veterans (SCV), made a contribution to your organization in the amount of $482.91, to assist in your work of finding companion and service dogs for American military veterans who need such assistance. A number of our members in Maryland helped to raise that modest contribution and gave of their time and money in doing so. Today that cashier's check was returned to us at our National Headquarters in Columbia, Tennessee with a brief note which says that your Board of Directors and members of your development committee had made a decision to "respectfully decline" being one of our "beneficiaries ". Your signatures were beneath.

There was no reason given for turning down this heartfelt gift. We, who have so many military veterans in our organization, cannot understand why you have done this. Without even the courtesy of an explanation, we do not feel that you have "respectfully" declined our gift, but indeed you have "disrespectfully" declined it. To us, this is an unconscionable insult to our historic and honorable heritage organization, and an insult to those whom you represent yourselves as serving, our wounded veterans. Your "decision" was gratuitous and terribly uninformed.

Sons of Confederate Veterans is one of our nation's oldest and largest heritage and genealogical groups. We were founded in 1896 and represent male direct descendants of those who fought in the American War Between The States. Our sole purpose is to commemorate and honor our ancestors. Currently there are 30,000 members throughout the United States and abroad.

There are more than 65 million American descendants of the armed forces of the Confederacy. We have served our nation in many ways. In every conflict in our nation's history we have sacrificed all to protect and defend our great nation.

The Sons of Confederate Veterans deplores the use of our forefathers ' symbols by racist and "hate groups". We find these actions to be a desecration. These bigoted displays dishonor our ancestors.

Your insulting refusal to accept our caring generosity also dishonors our ancestors. But perhaps worse, you have withheld badly needed assistance from American veterans because of someone's apparent fixation with "political correctness." This is sickeningly wrong-headed.

You will find no more patriotic Americans than the members of the Sons of Confederate Veterans. And we always stand willing to help America's veterans in every way. Given your decision, it remains to be seen if you share that same willingness.

Ben L. Jones

Chief of Heritage Operations

Sons of Confederate Veterans

Ben Jones' great grandfathers Isaac Lane and Harley Jenrette fought with the Army of Northern Virginia.

Jones served two terms in the United States Congress, where he was a member of the Veterans Committee. There he was instrumental in getting compensation for veterans who suffered from the effects of Agent Orange. A writer, businessman, and entertainer, Jones is well known for his portrayal of "Cooter" the mechanic on the ever-popular "Dukes of Hazzard".

Army of Tennessee Logo

Greetings Fellow Compatriots of the Army of Tennessee-
Just for one moment I would like you to think about any successful national company or your favorite sports team. They all have one thing in common... an easy to recognize logo that clearly identifies their product or franchise.

Our Confederate ancestors rallied around their own Regimental logos in the use of flags and banners. These instilled pride in oneself and the men of the units they were fighting with.

Today, I am announcing a friendly little Divisional competition to develop the new official logo for the Army of Tennessee. This logo will be used on all official documentation, a future A.O.T. flag, and to help our army stand out among our members. Since our army is the largest, we should also be the leader in developing our own logo first. Here is your chance to make a difference, a chance to design a logo for future generations of the A.O.T. to use and display with pride. The following is what we are proposing:

- (a) Develop your idea either on an individual basis or as a camp project.
- (b) When submitting a logo, please retain it in the original format of the application you are creating it in, if possible, or save it with no background color.
- (c) Resolution: 300 pixels pre inch. formats: png, psd, tif.
- (d) Email to: alasure@yahoo.com Please provide name and contact info.
- (e) All entries must be received by October 1, 2014. Winning logo will appear in a future edition of Confederate magazine.

Larry McCluney, A.O.T. Commander

Civil War Limericks

My new book, Civil War Limericks, has just been released and is now available at bookstores nationwide. It presents Civil War history in an entertaining way with 96 short narrations about personalities of the era, each illustrated with a caricature accompanied by a limerick verse. Both Southerners and Northerners are presented along with the quirks and foibles that make them memorable.

If the 96 short chapters are read sequentially, the reader will get a useful overview of the war. But each chapter is independent enough to stand on its own so that the reader can browse for those events or persons that intrigue him the most. Readers who are used to seeing the war from the politically correct perspective of a virtuous North and an evil South may be in for some surprises, but that is the fault of the historians who have misled generations of Americans. And those who have the misconception that Lincoln was a great humanitarian may be disappointed to see him tied to the Union army's policy of arson and pillage against Southern civilians,

Civil War Limericks is entertaining and educational at the same time. Personalities described include William Lloyd Garrison, Roger B. Taney, John Brown, Abraham Lincoln, Varina Davis, Jefferson Davis, Thomas J. Jackson, Pierre Beauregard, George McClellan, Julia Ward Howe, Belle Boyd, Joseph Hooker, Richard Ewell, Dick Dowling, Raphael Semmes, Philip Sheridan, John Morgan, and many others.

Flag Restoration

In many cases the old veterans battle flags are our last physical link to their valor. Many of their flags are in possession of the State of Mississippi Archives and History. There they are rotting away to dust. It is up to us as decedents of these brave men to preserve their battle flags for our ancestors to see. There are three funding activities. Direct donations, SCV car tags, and sale of coffee cups. Our camp has a supply of coffee cups.

THE CAIRO

by: Joel T. Bailey

*The Cairo was built in 1861 and was called an ironclad
It was one of several the Union Navy had*

*On the Ohio and Mississippi it gained a reputation
And was very active in the Tennessee occupation*

*But the Cairo made its last run on December 12, 1862
It was hit by a rebel mine and sunk in the muddy Yazoo*

*Altho no one was killed it made a deadly sound
And it took just twelve minutes for the Cairo to go down*

*It was raised from its watery grave in 1964
Now it rests in a museum as part of the wars lore*

Bricks for Beauvoir

The plans are for a brick plaza around the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Each brick would cost $50.00 and would have the name of a Confederate ancestor of members of the SCV who give to the effort. "The Bricks for Beauvoir" Project is spearheaded by Larry McCluney, Past Commander of the Mississippi Division. Thirteen columns, in a crescent, will represent the 13 States of the Confederacy and will fly the flag of each respective State. AOT Commander, now Commander in Chief, Kelly Barrow, gave a challenge to the Department Commanders to see which Army could raise the most money toward the project. ATM Councilman, Chuck McMichael, offered the following resolution in support of the Monument: "Be it resolved that the Sons of Confederate Veterans does hereby endorse fully, the Monument to the Unknown Soldier and gives its whole-hearted support for the concerted efforts of the Mississippi Division, SCV." The GEC gave unanimous consent and support to the project.

By purchasing an Ancestral Memorial Brick for just $50.00 each, your money will go to rebuilding a national treasure. Each brick will be laid, memorializing your ancestor, in a plaza around the Tomb of the Unknown Confederate Soldier at Beauvoir.

Chaplains Corner

For the Brethren:

Consider our Lord's remarks to his disciples on the night before his crucifixion as found in St. John 14:1-3: Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. And further on in that same chapter our Lord said...I will pray the Father and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever, even the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him; for he dwelleth with you and shall be in you. I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you(vv.16-18). These words mirror the words of the 23 Psalm: The LORD is my shepherd...he maketh me to lie down in green pastures...he leadeth me beside the still waters...

The Good Shepherd sent his most holy Spirit to guide, comfort and indwell all who are his elect and beloved until he comes again. The Holy Ghost does not stand apart from his own, but actually resides within every regenerated believer, speaking to us the deep things which God through Christ would have us know for our edification. And it is by virtue of the Spirit of God that select men are called into the ministry for the purpose of shepherding the various flocks of our Lord which are scattered across the world.

Article XIX of the Anglican Articles of Religion states that: "The visible Church of Christ is a congregation of faithful men, in the which the pure Word of God is preached, and the Sacraments be duly ministered according to Christ's ordinance, in all those things that of necessity are requisite to the same." That is the "acid test" of Anglicanism, but it should be the same for all of the churches regardless of their denominational brand. The Good Shepherd came to establish his church and create, via the new covenant, a more perfect relationship between God and mankind. The church is the fold of Christ, a haven from the world, a place of sanctuary, and a place of sanctity. It is a place where God's peace is shared by those who are born again of the Spirit. It is a place where God's word written is respected as the whole truth against all else to the contrary. And while there are a host of church bodies, they all possess one door, and that is Jesus Christ. They may speak different languages, and use differing forms of worship, but they are, nevertheless, brothers and sisters in Christ.

One day, the many folds shall be one when our Lord returns to collect his own. In the Book of Revelation (3:9-10), Jesus said: To the angel of the Church of Philadelphia write:...I have set before thee an open door...Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell on the earth... Our Lord has promised to come again and bring us to our everlasting home. So then let us live in humble expectation of that august promise as noted in First Thessalonians 4:16-18: For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words.

Let us pray,

Father, keep us steadfast as we watch for the coming of thy Son, that by the indwelling of thy Spirit we might be kept safe from all evil; for this we ask in the name of him who is the Good Shepherd, even Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.
